

Follow the next steps of the Project Navigating Tourism Crisis Recovery

As the T-Crisis-Nav project has been running for a year, the partners recently met in-person on November 2nd to discuss next steps. The team spent the past year learning about the situation of companies within the tourism sector during the pandemic crises and what training will be helpful for future success. As a result of this information, the next two work projects will directly support individual SMEs. The first will focus on the development of training modules for companies. The other work package will include more regional crisis responses from a higher education perspective.

News

Covid in Iceland

In Iceland, the COVID-19 crisis has, like elsewhere, taken its toll on the tourism industry. In order to better understand the reaction of the industry, a small study

READ MORE

Smart Tourism award recognizes sustainability and digitization

COVID-19 has changed the tourism industry, but this award recognizes cities that are responding to the changes with

READ MORE

Scottish tourism and COVID-19: what's the outlook for the sector?

The outlook for tourism is extraordinarily uncertain worldwide, and recovery will depend on interlinked factors related to

READ MORE

How COVID-19 is affecting employees in the tourism industry

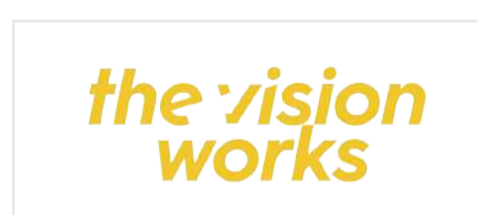

Barcelona is a city that heavily depends on tourism for economic revenue. The COVID-19 pandemic brought European

READ MORE

Tourism Crisis Navigation

Project Partners

Co-funded by the Erasmus+ Programme of the European Union

"This programme has been funded with support from the European Commission. The author is solely responsible for this publication (communication) and the Commission accepts no responsibility for any use that may be made of the information contained therein 2020-1-UK01-KA203-079083"